NORWAY AND VICINITY.

Drank Carbolio Acid.

Richard Schaefer, the clerk at the Beal's hotel, who has been there since the 22d of June, 1908, committed suicide at the hotel Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, by drinking carbolio acid.

When Mr. Schaefer was found he was still living but in great pain. Doctors were summoned and all efforts to save his life were resorted to. The stomach pump was used but to no effect.

Mr. Schaefer was about 45 years of age and leaves a father, who is a gunsmith at West Roxbury, Mass., and one son.

Schaefer, during the time he has been at the Beal's Hotel, was generally liked and has made many acquaintances.

He was discovered by a chamber maid who was attracted by his breathing.

His door was locked and the lock had to be broken. He was despondent it is thought from indulgence in liquor and the day before Schaefer told South, the chef, he had some carbolio acid in his room and that he was going to drink it and end his life. That night Anthony Young, a close friend of Schaefer, heard of the threat to kill himself and searched the room and person for the poison was unable to find anything.

Mr. Schaefer came here from Boston where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Schaefer, reside. He was married but did not live with his wife. A son 20 years old also survives. The body was taken in charge by J. F. Bolster and the man's relatives notified.

Landlord John Woodman of the Beal's House feels the death of his clerk very keenly. The first eight months Schaefer was in his employ he never knew of his taking liquor. That morning Mr. Woodman got up early but hearing Schaefer about his work down stairs went back to bed. Not long after he was told there was no one in the office and went down and took charge. He did not see Schaefer again.

Schaefer went on a vacation about four weeks ago and appeared to be much changed on his return. Mr. Schaefer's father is the maker of the famous Schaefer gun.

Charles Johnson.

Charles Johnson died at the City hospital at Portland last Thursday night after a long illness at the age of 67 years. Mr. Johnson lived in Norway many years until last spring, when he became ill and went to Portland to live with his sister, Mrs. M. E. Bradish. He leaves besides his sister, four brothers, Geo. H. Johnson of Lincoln Center, Elbridge Johnson of North Windham, Alvin A. Mains of South Casco and Calvin E. Mains of North Windham.

The funeral was held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

James N. Favor visited Portland, Wednesday, to consult a specialist. He will probably have to submit to an operation for gall stones later.

The citizens of Bryant Pond are considering the water question. The point at issue is over the right of the Norway at Paris St. R. Co., to raise the gates and lower the water of Lake Christopher. A mass meeting of the citizens has been held and a committee appointed to investigate. Bryant Pond has no water system and the water supply of the village is taken from the lake wells and when the water in Lake Christopher is drawn off a number of wells go dry. Not only this, but the many summer people, who own cottages on the lake and take their water supply from driven wells are likewise affected.

E. P. Mayo, editor of the Turf, Farm and Home of Waterville, and a member of the board of inspectors of jails and prisons for the State, was in this vicinity, Wednesday. We visited Dr. Alfred King's farm in Paris, the Portland surgeon who is tilling the soil for fun and profit; also the poultry farm of T. B. Roberts, Norway Lake, the Benj Tucker milk farm, Sanborn's Folly and Dr. C. A. Stephens' place. A call was made at the residence of Freeland Howe Jr., on Pleasant Street and his house and the magnificent scenery thereabouts admired. Moore Park at South Paris and the cemetery were inspected. Mr. Mayo recovered his lost glasses at Shurtleff & Co's., and took the 4 p. m. express for Auburn.

The fire was pulled from under the boilers of C. B. Cummings & Sons last Tues day and the plant, as far as steam is concerned, is silent for the first time in over five years. It is understood that C. B. Cummings & Sons are to arrange a steam system and supply steam to the Hathaway Block, the Norway Opera House and the Smiley and Prince stores. The piping, instead of passing under the streets as in the old system, will be suspended on scaffolding in the rear of the buildings. This will save the expense of digging and breaking up the streets for repairs. The people occupying these buildings are very well pleased with the outlook for some way of getting heat for the coming winter.

George W. Noyes of Gorham, N. H., is visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity. Mr. Noyes was born on Upton Ridge over eighty years ago. He has been visiting his wife's sister, Mrs. Orrin Tubbs, his wife being Julia A. Horn. Mr. Noyes was in the employ of the St. Lawrence & Grand Trunk railroad for over fifty years. He was locomotive engineer for some fifteen years, had charge of the Island Pond repair shops twenty-six years and occupied an official position in the Gorham repair shop with his brother, Warren Noyes, until he retired from active service. He is a very interesting man to talk with as he can tell you many interesting stories of the old-time railroading from Island Pond to Portland.

COL. ALBERT J. STEARNS

Mohawks Defeated.

Radcliffe, 2; Mohawk, 0.

Yes, that ball game last Saturday afternoon at the fair grounds was a corker. There was something new and startling from the opening overture to the final curtain. Everybody was kept in a state of nervous palpitation because of the narrow margin between the winner and the team who wanted to be, or rather expected to catch a bunch of "farmers" napping.

So close was the line drawn, a single error or mislay in any department would have changed the beautiful complexion of either team, and proved disastrous for any hopes of ever closing with even the slightest lead.

The Good Luck Deity, who is supposed to control the destinies of ball games, must have been taking a vacation up the lake, and had nothing whatever to do with this mighty battle. It was just, practical and timely work that brought Radcliffe under the wire a winner, thus throwing up to the strong Mohawk club a pill without the coat of sugar.

This was the visitor's first defeat this season and the medicine didn't go down without a struggle. It was bitter stuff but Doctor William Leith and his staff of the county have well stepped, just filled the visiting patients with a preparation which was expected by many up this way would be a steep producer for the Norway delegation themselves.

Yes, the battle was fierce and hotly waged from every quarter. Every man on both teams got a toe hold and sprung at any chance for a put out, an assist or a hit, in fact clutched with vigor on to every old thing which might give advantage to their own delegation and cut into the advancement of familiarity from the opposing forces. Neither side could lay claim to great superiority. Both were well matched and both played great base ball in every position. It was simply a case of "big dog chew big dog"; the dog using its whole mastiffing machinery to the best advantage. Last the best of the scrimmage and won out by its persistency.

Now for the game. The Portland Mohawks, a team with a State reputation, were the first batters up and faced Uncle Bill with the determination of driving him across the track into the low land beyond the fence, but it didn't happen at three heavy hitters were tried by Gammon first in quick order. Radcliffe faced Libby on their first trial trip but they fared no better as "Kid" Harrison fanned, Clason was passed, Lanan fled to Springer and Leith thrown out by Libby to Gooding.

In the second, Abbott was hit by a pitched ball thus made a start along the line; Gooding fanned; Springer passed the hot grounder for Uncle Bill's ankle bone but couldn't reach first before the ball was recovered and lashed to Gammon. Higgins tried the bunk scheme but Lanan rushed ahead of the plate, captured the ball and had him a mile when he threw to Gammon. When Radcliffe came in, Lizotte cut the cake by a single; Young sacrificed; Gammon pushed up a fly to Springer for an out; King picked out a beauty and claimed a hit but Abbott caught him at second while stealing.

Libby was the first Mohawk up in the third session, and the first visitor to claim a single from Bill; Bradbury sacrificed; Higgins tried the bunk scheme but Lanan rushed ahead of the plate, captured the ball and had him a mile when he threw to Gammon. Mrs. Mehtable H. Damon.

Mrs. Mehtable H. Damon, wife of Merritt F. Damon, died suddenly July 15th, at the advanced age of 80 years and 2 days. The passing of this worthy wife and mother deserves special mention. She came of an excellent line of people. Her father was Oliver Cummings of New York, and the daughter obtained an excellent education in the public schools of the city.

Her brother, who recently died, was a prominent clergyman and was located in New York. He served one church 30 years and was held in high esteem by his people. At the age of 30 she married Merritt F. Damon and settled in West Sumner. Four children were born to them, the only surviving one of whom is Mrs. Charles W. Chick of Paris street, Norway.

Nearly two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Damon came to live with the daughter, and united with the Congregational church. One sister, Mrs. Harriet Damon of Buckfield, is still living.

Mrs. Damon has always been a hard working woman but of such genial disposition and lovable character that she greatly endeared herself to all who knew her. The patient and beautiful Christian spirit which she constantly exhibited in her daily toil made her home the center of the best things of life. She brought sunshine and good cheer to her home with her daughter, and greatly endeared herself to the grandchildren and all.

Infirmity has been creeping on for years but last Thursday evening she was taken suddenly worse and soon quietly passed away.

The funeral service was attended by the pastor, Rev. B. S. Rideout, Saturday morning at Mr. Chick's. Interment was at Buckfield. The flowers, by immediate friends and neighbors, and the service were numerous and beautiful. So we say farewell. Her memory is blessed.

Parents and Children.

Alfred Mosely, the Englishman, does not approve of the American custom of the child growing up in the home circle in the companionship with the parents and the adults of the family. He would have the child relegated to the nursery.

He says with the assurance of one who believes he is right: "The close companionship of American fathers and mothers with their children is one of the greatest dangers of American home life. It is not only unwise, it is a positive evil."

The objection is on the score that the brains and emotions of the youngsters are overstimulated. "More or less unconsciously," he says, "they are expected to think the thoughts and feel the impulses of their parents, instead of the natural, childlike thoughts and impulses, which are mostly instinctive."

"Instead of being allowed to run along on their own level," he says, in picturesque fashion, "the children are being continually forced up an inclined plane—to a higher level, doubtless, but they would reach it in good time without compulsion, if they were left alone—and they'd be so much less tired when they arrived."

He says something about its being true that children can be children but once, and that children in America seem to be the desire to eliminate even the once. "You have," he said, speaking to an American, "little men and women but no children. The normal human child is primarily a healthy little animal. The 'normal' in American children is 'smart,' nervous business manikin, charming and clever and attractive very, very often—but abnormal. American children boss parents and even savages command greater respect from their offspring than the American fathers and mothers."

Oldest Newspaper in World to Suspend.

It is reported from China that the oldest newspaper in the world, the Pekin Gazette, is about to suspend publication, says the New York Sun. The first number appeared in 1814 A. D. and since 1891, more than a century before the discovery of America, it has appeared regularly.

The Pekin Gazette has published a daily budget of the imperial news and has been a repository of edicts from the throne, memorials from provincial governors and reports from Chinese officials. It would be wrong to infer that its contents were always dry. Frequently the Gazette has contained news of great interest to the world and information illuminating one phase or another of Chinese character or the governmental regime.

Perhaps we read one day that not only had the emperor who had been so long a ruler been severely punished, but the officer whose duty it was to inspect the stores and see that they were intact was condemned to 80 blows and dismissed from the service. This showed the grave responsibility imposed upon Chinese officials.

It was Li Hung Chang who reported that the officials along the Yang-tze river had risked their lives in their efforts to prevent it from inundating the surrounding country. The first number appeared in 1814 A. D. and since 1891, more than a century before the discovery of America, it has appeared regularly.

The Gazette often told of cases where bits of the flesh of a son or daughter were cooked and eaten by a parent afflicted with obstinate illness. It was believed that their lives might thus be saved.

A few years ago a report in the Gazette from the governor of Yunnan said that in some of the country districts the villagers had a horrible custom of burning to death any man caught stealing corn or fruit in the fields. Then followed detailed accounts of some of these events. The files of the venerable paper are among the curiosities of typography. During a part of the 18th century it was printed in the imperial palace from movable copper type and in the last 80 years from movable type carved out of wood.

The Chinese government will now supplant the publication by the Government Gazette, which will be much larger and conducted along more modern lines. It will be the official government paper. The disappearance of the Pekin Gazette is one of the signs of the times illustrating the mighty changes that are coming to pass in China.

Satisfied.

A man entered a grocery store and drew a slip of paper from his pocket. A clerk, with pencil and order pad, stepped up in anticipation. The man adjusted a pair of glasses on his nose and looked over the list.

"Do you keep Bopo Soap Powder?" he asked.

"Bopo? No sir, we have several other soap powders, but no Bopo," answered the clerk.

"Paradise Creamery Butter?" inquired the man.

"No, sir, we don't carry Paradise," replied the clerk.

"Have you Silver Star Baking Powder?" he continued.

"Silver Star?" repeated the grocer helplessly. "No, sir, we have most every other kind, but no Silver Star."

"Well, how about Queen Lil Sweet Corn? Do you carry the Queen Lil line of goods?"

"Sorry, sir, but we don't," said the clerk.

"All right, then, I guess I'll trade here," said the man. "Those are the brands on which I've been stung."

Imported Parasites.

A consignment of browntail and gypsy moth parasites, or rather with caterpillars infected with the parasites, has arrived at the Massachusetts state laboratory imported from Japan, Russia and various parts of Europe. The best hope of combating the pests lies in these.

In the old world they prey upon the caterpillars and their numbers within limits, but over here the creatures have found few or no natural enemies, and this combined with a favorable environment and marvelous fecundity, has allowed them to increase enormously. If the parasites flourish as well as their prey, they should be more effective than all other preventive measures.

The relief, if relief it proves, has come none too soon.

Breaking in Young Horses.

Experienced horse owners appreciate the value of handling, leading and controlling generally their foals from an early age, while others leave the handling of young colts to the day when breaking is commenced, says a writer in the Farm Journal.

A moment's consideration will show which is the better course. In the one case confidence has long been established between horse and man. The horse, while recognizing that he must submit to control, knows that the new experiences which come his way are not likely to do him any harm. In the other case the horse knows nothing. His natural tendency is to regard any measures taken for his control as so many elements of danger to be avoided as far as possible, and to be resisted strenuously.

Satisfactory horses are to be produced by either of these systems; but horses are very easily spoiled either by not having their wild ways curbed, or by being soured by excessive severe treatment.

The average man does not make allowance for want of intelligence in the horse; he does not appreciate the fact that the horse does not know the meaning of the human language; he does not know that the stupidity of the horse is due to his own defective methods. Horses may be spoiled by either system, but fewer horses are spoiled by kindness than by over-severity.

To determine the best type of steer for the feeder is an important problem which the Nebraska experiment station is endeavoring to solve. Last winter Professor Smith selected thirty-six steers and took the measurements of each one in the most minute particular. While the experiment has not been carried to a sufficient extent to announce positive results, it is interesting to note that the steer that made the best gain in the feed lot was the one having the largest heart girth in proportion to his weight. The steer showing the smallest gain had a very small heart girth. While that is the result of only one winter's work and cannot be taken as establishing any positive law, still it looks very much as if cattle with large lung power, with good hearts and consequently a good digestion are best calculated to make big gains in the feed lot. The experiments are being continued.

Good Bull Worth Good Care.

If you purchase a good young bull, don't let him rustle for his living around a straw stack with the other cattle. If he is of the good growthy kind, there is no doubt that he has been well fed since birth, and any sudden change toward rougher conditions will stop his growth and no doubt lessen his value as a prepotent sire. If a bull is worth a moderately high price he is well deserving of good care in a new home.

THE JAPANESE FERN.

For Successful Growing the Plant Needs Plenty of Moisture.

Many persons who admire the Japanese fern balls which do so well for some home gardeners and fall utterly for others know little of the character of the plant, thousands of which are imported each season. The scientific name is Davallia bullata, but it is a species of the haremoot fern that is a native to Japan. It has a creeping root which runs along the surface of the ground, and from it small, fibrous roots are thrown out as feeders.

These creeping root stocks, or rhizomes, are gathered by the Japanese and closely fastened over frames filled with sphagnum moss, which retains moisture in abundance when the plants are growing.

The Japanese love to grow these ferns in all sorts of odd shapes, such as houses, animals, wreaths, pagodas, boats and figures, but few except the balls are imported.

The chief reason for failure to have the ferns green is that they are not given enough moisture and are kept in too hot rooms. It is well to immerse the baskets occasionally in a tub of tepid water and never let them dry out.

Dusters Automatically.

Even the enterprising housewife has failed to find a method of keeping the dust off the window shades. It settles on the upper portion of the shade, being very perceptible when the shade is pulled down. She hates to get at it with a duster, as that requires the aid of a stepladder to reach it. A Canadian inventor offers an excellent solution of the problem in the automatic duster for window shades shown in the accompanying illustration. The duster is constructed as a part of the roller on which the shade revolves.

As the latter is allowed to go up or down the surface of that part of the shade passing over the roller. As the shade is generally raised or lowered at least once a day, the shade is given at least a daily dusting. This attachment should prove of great value where white shades are employed, keeping them clean and thus prolonging their usefulness.

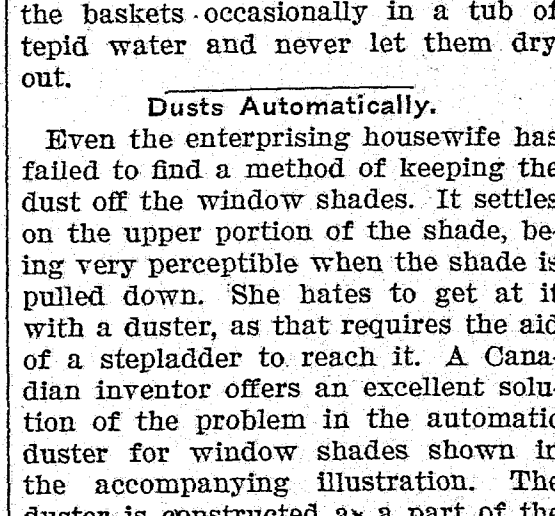

Newer Than Post Cards.

The sadly overworked picture postal has blossomed out in a new guise which is really worth while.

It is made of fine white card of excellent quality, and instead of the usual picture on the back there is a selected quotation or motto beautifully printed and hand illuminated.

The postals are attractive enough to be given the dignity of a frame and would often solve the problem of a valentine gift, which represents small money value.

The conventional flower borders on some of the cards are exquisitely tinted, and the quotations chosen cover a large variety of subjects.

Another advantage of the small pens is the ease with which one can keep the lambs warm and comfortable in severely cold weather. The sides of the pens will keep the wind from blowing in the sides, but the cold air from above often chills the little fellows when still moist. A few loose boards can be laid over the pens, so that the coldest nights. I have saved lambs in that way when the thermometer was cuddling down to 20 degrees below zero. In the small pen with low cover the breath of the ewe makes it warm.

Preserving News Items.

"Preserving of News Items" in country towns, by clipping them from the newspapers as they appear and pasting them in scrap books for the use of the future town historian is now being discussed.

Another point of some importance is that no newspaper can be free from errors, the items, being collected and pasted up at the time when the circumstances are still familiar, corrections can easily be made on the margin. Of this the future investigator will be able to see how the item originally appeared in print and at the same time have the advantage of corrections which may be important, and which he would not find in a newspaper file, even if he had succeeded in locating the particular item which he sought.

For the last quarter of a century and more the editor of the ADVERTISER has had a copy of the files bound and placed in the Norway Public Library for reference. The files of the ADVERTISER contain probably the most complete history the towns in this vicinity have. The scrap book idea is a grand thing. Let each town paste the items from their own town in one.

AT LAMBING TIME.

How the Wise Shepherd Prepares to Meet Emergencies.

The thoughtful shepherd and good shepherd is looking ahead to be prepared to meet emergencies at lambing time. It is a good plan, says N. A. Clapp, the successful Michigan breeder, to have a good milking cow fresh just before lambing time, or if one has many ewes it will pay to buy one rather than to go without the new milk.

Get an old fashioned teapot with a round spout. Wind the cloth, leaving the opening free to let the milk out. Then get some rubber nipples at the drug store and the one on the end of the spout. When the time comes to need the milk put into the teapot the new, warm milk and go among the little lambs. Sometimes a fresh arrival lacks strength to get up quickly and take his dinner from the ewe. Put the nipple in his mouth and let him take a little and see how it will revive him.

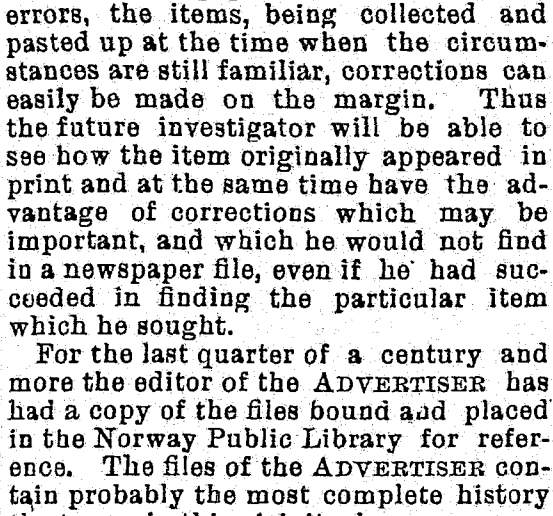

If the mother of twins does not have milk enough for both lambs, one can help them along by giving the little fellows some milk regularly. Several ways will be suggested by which the lambs can be helped along by the milk from the cow. Don't overlook this phase of the preparation. By the use of it many valuable lambs can be raised that would be lost without the milk.

Just before the lambs are expected either fix some small pens inside the sheep house or have the material ready so that impromptu pens can be put in very quickly when needed. As soon as an ewe shows signs of lambing put her into the small pen where she will not be molested by the other sheep and the lamb will not be run over before he is able to get up. By confining the ewe she will give her first attention to the lamb. If she is loose in the flock she will, in some cases, go away from it. On this account the lamb will be lost from want of care and food.

Another advantage of the small pens is the ease with which one can keep the lambs warm and comfortable in severely cold weather. The sides of the pens will keep the wind from blowing in the sides, but the cold air from above often chills the little fellows when still moist. A few loose boards can be laid over the pens, so that the coldest nights. I have saved lambs in that way when the thermometer was cuddling down to 20 degrees below zero. Flowers for Little Ones.

The Boston Journal Plans a Flower Day for Distributing Flowers to Children.

The Boston Journal has inaugurated a novel feature for the little children of Boston. It has established a Flower Day, when flowers may be brought to the Journal representatives and will be distributed by them to the little ones of the city. The Journal has secured the co-operation of the clergy of greater Boston, the suburban newspapers, the florists and the good people at large.

Never before has such an attractive affair of its kind been attempted and the call for co-operation in the project has been answered a thousandfold more enthusiastically than was ever dreamed of.

With Boston as a common center flower may be received on Monday morning between the hours of 7 and noon at the designated places already established in every city within a radius of twenty miles.

Receiving places will also be in readiness at the terminals of both the elevated railway and the street car lines. Thousands upon thousands of flowers are needed for the work and it goes without saying that the children who seldom see the gay warm color of the garden and the green of the fields will thrill and marvel at the beauty and fragrance that will pour into the stuffy and unclean streets of the Boston slums on Monday.

The Way They Kill the Brown-tails in Sanford.

For the last few nights at Sanford bonfires have been kept burning in the public square for the purpose of helping to destroy the brown-tail moth. Millions of the millers swarm around the big electric light in the square and the fires are built beneath, whereupon the light is extinguished and the majority of the millers destroyed. The fires are kept burning and the giddy creatures throng to the blaze and thus meet their end.

Balance in Furniture.

To lay down a set of rules for arranging the furniture in any room is obviously impossible, as circumstances differ so radically. But there are certain things that can be done successfully with furniture and others that spoil the appearance of the most expensive room.

First and foremost, a room, meaning by that not to get all the heavy pieces or all the large pictures on one side. If, for example, there is a large sofa against one wall, across from it there should be a table or something like that to preserve the equalities. It need not be exactly across, but somewhere on the other side, to avoid looking as though, were the floor swung one side, it would go down and the other come up. In rearranging a room the rugs, if any are used, should be taken up and the floors left so that the chairs, etc., can be easily moved to experiment for the best placing.

More Water Power.

The first step toward the building of the famous Magalloway dam which is to store the head waters of the Magalloway river and to create another great lake in the heart of Maine, whose waters shall increase the efficiency of the water powers along the Androscoggin, was taken at Portland by the organization of the Androscoggin Reservoir company.

The company has a capital stock of $300,000. A. N. Burbank of New York was elected president; W. H. White of Lewiston, treasurer and A. N. Burbank, Francis W. Fabyan of Boston, Hugh J. Chisholm and Herbert L. Brown of Portland, directors. W. H. Sawyer of Lewiston was chosen agent and engineer. The work of the construction of the dam will begin at once.

The Magalloway dam will be one of the notable structures of the country. It will be more than 45 feet in height. Will hold back one of the largest bodies of water in Maine.

Without doubt with proper engineering, work, and money many a fine water power might be developed along our Maine streams.

We all remember the ancient water storage lakes of the Nile river. There the water was used to irrigate the Nile valley in the dry season, and made of the Nile valley the garden of the world.

We might take a lesson of these ancient people, dead so many years ago, by storing up the waters of our rivers in the spring into lakes to use in manufacturing. Surely enough water runs to waste in the spring for sufficient power to make Maine a manufacturing state. Water for power along the rivers could be stored and used for manufacturing in many available places.

A Nuisance Charge.

M. R. Fogg, first selectman of Summer and superintendent of East Summer corn shop, was in the Rumford municipal court, charged with maintaining a liquor nuisance. County Attorney Parker prosecuted the case.

A complaint was made to the Sturgis commission that the liquor law was being violated in the corn shop boarding house and the commission notified County Attorney Parker, who sent Deputies Small and Niles down to investigate.

The investigation resulted in the finding of several bottles each of which contained a small quantity of whiskey. As the boarding house is under Mr. Fogg's control, he was arrested.

The court held the respondent under $200 bonds for appearance at Supreme court.

Military Spirit Of Women.

Once Reckoned Among Fighting Strength of Nations.

From the nature of things woman soldiers can only be found as a class among barbarians—up to this time, made a point of view against the French, but Burton had been much impressed with them forty years earlier—and was a judge. The discipline was terribly severe in his time; he did not doubt but they were very formidable troops. Relaxation of discipline ruined them.

The mythical Amazons claim a world, since Professor Sayce adduced such striking evidence to suggest that they were the warrior priestesses of Hittite invaders. Of the American Amazons it may be recalled that Burton thought the legend not impossible, and he had studied the original records. Very few who have written on the subject are thus qualified probably, but Alfred Wallace has shown us lately that Spruce, the great botanist, looked into the evidence carefully and formed a strong opinion that it was trustworthy.

Vikings Shield Maidens.

Much more interesting are the shield maidens of the Vikings. Would that we knew more about them personally. The historical sage allude to them, but always, so far as I remember, in a matter of fact way, as to male personages. One of the grandest poetic sagas is that of the Shield Maiden Hervor, but even this is told for granted nearly everything we particularly want to know. She dressed as a man and joined the Vikings. Presently she gained the command of her party—and the story opens, true in the main probably.

The circumstantial account of the battle of Bravoll between Sigurd of Denmark and Harold Hildtoun of Norway mentions several shield maidens who commanded troops. One even bore Harold's standard. All fought like heroes, and one of them died on the field. But it seems that they were only women who rose to command by daring and military genius. Is there any authority for the legends of Viking bands wholly feminine?

Irish Battle Women.

The old Irish Book of Leacan says casually "for men and women went out to battle in those days," and the record of tribal obligations, called "Hasting," reckoned women among the fighting strength. Moreover, the life of Abbot Adamnan of Iona tells how he, hearing of this dreadful practice, went to Ireland, called an assembly of chiefs and bishops, and persuaded them to pass a law, still extant, entitled "Lex innocentium," which forbade the summoning of women to war. It seems likely, however, that they still turned out of their own free will.

At the present day in Europe the Montenegris and their hereditary foes of Albania include the women in their fighting force—or did, at any rate, a very few years ago. Prince Nicholas had organized his army. All departments of supply were left to the wives and daughters; also the recovery and transport of the wounded. But when the fighting line was seriously pressed the women reinforced it. It is assuredly true that they followed the old custom in spite of the prince's reforms had Austria advanced into the Black mountains the other day. [Fall Mail Gazette.]

Drummer Of Shiloh.

An interesting story is told of the way Colonel John L. Clem, the famous "drummer boy of Shiloh" and now assistant quartermaster general, got into the regular army. In the early days of General Grant's first term as President, Clem, without aid secured an audience. The President said, "What can I do for you?"

Clem said, "Mr. President, I wish to ask you for an order to admit me to West Point."

"But why," said the President "do you not take the examination?"

"I did, Mr. President, but failed to pass."

"That was unfortunate," said the President. "How was that?"

"Why, Mr. President, you see I was in the war, and while I was there those other boys of my age were in school."

"What!" said the president, amazed, "You were in the war?"

Clem was then scarcely eighteen and boyish looking.

"Yes, Mr. President, I was in the war four years." And he related his experience.

The President then wrote something, sealed it and handing it to Clem, said: "Take this to the secretary of war; guess it will fix you all right."

Clem went to the secretary, to whom he had already applied, and was received somewhat coldly. He delivered the note. The secretary read it and said: "Do you know what this is?"

"No," said Clem, "but I supposed it was an order to admit me to West Point."

"Well, it isn't," said the secretary; "it's an order to commission you second lieutenant in the regular army."

The Whistle Attachment.

A whistle attachment for the under side of the pistol grip is a new attachment that is said will not frighten deer and is expected to warn any human being at whom the gun may be pointed.

There is some advantage in this for when the hunting season is on our roads and fields will resound with one constant loud whistle that will effectively drown the shrieks of the dead and dying.

Heated Cars for Produce.

The farmers of Maine want heated cars for their shipments of apples and potatoes in winter. A hearing as to whether the railroad companies should provide these cars was recently held before United States Commerce Commissioner Charles A. Prouty. The result of the hearing is of interest to the shippers and jobbers.

Brown tail moths by the million are flying around the electric lights and sticking on every building and fence post near by. The wise man who said they were all male moths has another guess coming to him, for there are fully as many females as there are males. They all seem to be somewhat feeble, however, and when they are judiciously "swatted" they lie down and die without a protest.—[Argus.]

Deformed Apples in Maine.

The Curculio.

Much concern is expressed by orchardists in Maine who are troubled by deformed and worthless fruit. One fruit grower in Oxford reports 60 barrels of worthless fruit last season and prospect of several hundred dollars loss this, and various orchards over at least the southern third of the State are in a similar predicament. Orchard owners who have had trouble with gnawed and galled apples are urged to examine their fruit at once for the crescent shaped wound which the curculio makes, and which at this season is easily recognized.

Apple injury by the Curculio (Conotrachelus nemoralis) is one of the most serious insect troubles in the Maine orchards, and one least recognized by apple growers. As it is to all appearances rapidly on the increase, orchardists cannot afford to neglect the alarming situation.

This trouble is of such a serious character and of such economic importance that the Maine Station has kept a record of orchards where complaints of deformed fruit in the fall have been made and visited these the next spring (1907, 1908, 1909) at which time the trouble could be definitely determined. The curculio has been bred by the Station Entomologist, from the young apples troubled in this way, the effects of the curculio wounds on apples at different stages noted, and the situation carefully studied.

The methods of controlling this pest are tedious but effective and possible and (if apples are to be grown in orchards now infested) necessary. They are also beneficial to the orchard in other respects. Specimens of deformed apples will be examined and the curculio work, if present, identified for any orchardist in the State applying to the Station for information. Such specimens should be presented within the next fortnight while the wounds are still characteristic. Not less than one quart of apples should be submitted for this purpose.

An illustrated circular on the Plum Curculio and the apple giving life history notes and remedial measures is available for distribution to all who apply to the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Maine, for it.

Half Dollar of 1838 Brings $570 at Sale.

Rare United States coins the number of 430, representing an intrinsic value of about $1,000, were auctioned at the Collectors' club, No. 24 West 26th street, New York city, for about five times their face value. The coins were part of the collection of the late James B. Wilson, one of the noted numismatists of the world, and collectors from all over the country bid in eager rivalry to get the rarities.

The big sale of the day was the New Orleans half dollar of 1838. This coin, worth 50 cents on its face, brought $570, the purchaser being Thomas L. Elder, under whose auspices the sale was conducted. Mr. Wilson bought the coin in 1834 at a high figure, and it is the finest specimen of its kind. Mr. Elder purchased it for a client.

Other coins bringing high prices were a 1797 eagle, which went at $50.50; a set of 200, $10, $5, $3, $3 1/2 and $1 gold pieces of 1833, which sold for $220; a 1794 silver dollar for $180; and a 1797 half dollar for $75.

A half dime of 1802, which brought $390 the last time it was sold, 24 years ago, is expected to bring more than $500. The Barber's gold piece of 1834, last sold in 1882, is expected to bring at least $1,500. There are only four of its kind known, and it is considered the greatest numismatic prize of the collection.

In addition to the many rare United States coins, the Wilson collection contains some foreign gold and silver pieces of great value. The sale is expected to amount to about $15,000.

Trap Moths.

At the Kittery Navy Yard the authorities are exterminating brown tail moths by the German method. The white moths, which are now flying in swarms of thousands, are generally regarded as being harmless. All the harm they are capable of has been set before them by the fact that they are so numerous that they reach this State so that little attention is being paid to them in Portland.

But in Germany it is apparent that they are considered a pest that is to be fought at every stage and the Germans have been using for several years a machine with which to catch and destroy the moths. It is this machine that the authorities at the Kittery navy yard are now using.

It is a large suction fan and large cage, screened with wire netting, erected on wheels and connected with a powerful motor. The machine is hauled about the yard at night, an electric light, near the machine, turned on and the fan set in motion. Any moths coming within 25 feet of the light are sure to be drawn by the suction into the cage. They are afterwards burned. The machine has been in operation several nights and has caught all the millers in sight.

Keeping Bread.

It is said that bread keeps in a wooden box even better than in one of tin, and while this is interesting it is not to be supposed that careful housewives will immediately discard their old stand-bys, the square tin boxes, to take up with the newer and tin wood.

After all, the tin may be more easily washed and dried, and has no pores which may collect the germs. Perhaps the old-fashioned way is best.

It is a very good idea, however, to always wrap the loaves of bread in a clean white cloth, whether they be kept in a wooden or tin box. This will keep the bread absolutely fresh, and if the cloth is changed frequently it will be found that the loaves can be kept far longer than when they are placed in the box with nothing but the tin cover over them.

Whooping Cough.

If you have not had the whooping cough—look out if you don't want to lose your money. A large number of children and a few grown people have a cough that closely resembles the old-fashioned whooping cough, so called, probably from the sound.

In warm weather is the best time to have such a misfortune as far as safety from colds is concerned, but it is surely hard to be cooped up in the house and coughing these hot days. The fortunate person is the one who has "had it."

We have recently received a very interesting letter from Fergus Packard and wife of New South Wales, Australia. He is the son of Fred Packard and twin brother to John Packard of Woodstock, whose remains lie in the old family cemetery near where their father and mother once lived.
